How successful is Defibrillation?

Defibrillation has a much higher success rate than simple CPR on its own. With CPR only conducted on a victim of sudden cardiac arrest, the chance of survival is around 10%. When defibrillation is delivered within minutes, the victim's chance of survival can increase to 60, 70 or possibly 80%.

In Australia we have very good ambulance services, but with sudden cardiac arrest it is rapid defibrillation that is most likely to save a victim's life. By having a defibrillator at hand and introducing defibrillation into your sports clubs emergency response procedure, your club will be prepared should a sudden cardiac arrest occur.
